“Counter-Terrorism in Canada: 10 years after 9/11”

The Honourable Ronald G. Atkey, PC, QC

Adjunct Professor at University of Western Ontario and Osgoode Hall Law School

“After ten years, it is time to assess what lies ahead. Is international terrorism the only serious threat to the security of Canada? What about natural disasters, pandemics, damage to critical infrastructure, home-grown or lone wolf terrorists? Come out and hear the views of Canada's first security intelligence watchdog.”

The Honourable Ronald Atkey, PC, QC teaches National Security Law at The University of Western Ontario and Osgoode Hall Law School. He has been a Member of Parliament, the Minister of Immigration, a long-time partner at Osler and he was the first Chair of the Security Intelligence Review Committee established to review activities of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service (CSIS). Mr. Atkey served as amicus curiae to the Arar Commission of Inquiry and as a Special Advocate on anti-terrorism and immigration security certificate matters.
