

Nathanson Centre experts on transnational corporate accountability

Various Nathanson Centre researchers are good resource persons for journalists and commentators interested in transnational corporate accountability and global social justice with special reference to Canadian companies' activities abroad. They include:

- David Szablowski
emerging transnational norms requiring informed consent or consultation for extractive industry development on indigenous territory
- Shin Imai
Canadian mining activity in Guatemala and comparisons with mining law and practice in Canada in relation to aboriginal peoples' rights and jurisdiction
- Gus Van Harten
international investment arbitration, including proceedings initiated against the Government of El Salvador by Canadian mining company Pacific Rim
- Aaron Dhir
corporate social responsibility, human rights, and transnational corporations
- Stepan Wood
co-author with Stephen Clarkson of A Perilous Imbalance: The Globalization of Canadian Law and Governance, U of T Press, 2010, and the absence of adequate avenues to protect fundamental values in the face of the facilitation of global economic law
- Craig Scott
obstacles within the Canadian legal system to provide for just access to Canadian courts to persons harmed abroad by Canadian companies
- Robert Wai
the legal and ideological structures of public international law that impact on the ability of an 'international private law' to be an avenue to protect human rights and social justice more broadly