Building Osgoode has begun!

On May 29, 2009, Osgoode received the kick-start we needed to begin the transformation of our Law School — $25 million from the Federal-Provincial Knowledge Infrastructure Program. Construction of a new and expanded Law School building is a cornerstone of The Building Osgoode Campaign. It will give us the space we urgently need for teaching and learning, new programming, and to develop an even stronger community.

But the Campaign is bigger than a building. It’s also about aspirations. Donors believe in the Law School, its students, our faculty and what we can achieve together. They are helping to build Osgoode in other, equally important ways through support for initiatives like the Paul B. Helliwell Centre for Innovation in Dispute Resolution, student awards and new academic programming.

For many, Osgoode is an eminent Canadian institution. To our alumni, it’s also an important part of who they have become. This is most evident when individuals choose Osgoode as the place to leave their legacy. We are honoured that Charles and Anne Dubin, Marvin Catzman and the colleagues of Alison Youngman established permanent award endowments to help future generations of students. Each will be remembered, not only for their generosity, but also for their tangible demonstration that giving back to the Law School can change lives.

For nine years, it has been my privilege to work at Osgoode Hall Law School. I have witnessed our faculty’s dedication, our students’ enthusiasm and our alumni’s loyalty. They are all proud to be a part of the School, what it has accomplished and what it stands for. So am I.

Thank you for your generosity.

Paul B. Helliwell Centre for Innovation in Dispute Resolution

Osgoode Hall Law School has moved a step closer toward the construction of what will be the world’s leading electronic dispute resolution facility, thanks to the generosity of a Toronto man who left the bulk of his estate to his foundation so that it could continue to support worthy causes.

The Paul B. Helliwell Foundation has donated $1 million toward the cost of the multi-million dollar high-tech facility, which will consist of an electronic courtroom and specially designed space for alternative dispute resolution.

The facility will employ the latest in technology to assist law students, researchers, courts, mediators and arbitrators in exploring new ways to resolve disputes. In addition to being a laboratory where researchers will examine different dispute resolution environments, it will also feature actual court sittings (including Ontario Court of Appeal sittings) and other forms of dispute resolution activity, both within Canada and internationally.

“We’re just absolutely delighted to have your support and the support of the Foundation,” then Osgoode Dean Patrick Monahan told John Jenah, president of the Paul B. Helliwell Foundation, at the official signing of the Helliwell gift agreement on March 16, 2009. In addition to Monahan and Jenah, the signators to the agreement were York President & Vice-Chancellor Mamdouh Shoukri and Paul Marcus, President & CEO of the York University Foundation.

Monahan said the Law School’s renovation and expansion plans for its physical premises called for the development of several innovative, exciting projects that could be flagships within the new building and the dispute resolution facility was high on the list.

Shoukri also expressed gratitude on behalf of the University to the Helliwell Foundation. “It is always exciting to see the commitment of philanthropists to support the next generation of Canadians,” Shoukri said. “This is an investment that we appreciate and an investment that you will never regret.”

Paul Helliwell was born in China in 1917 to parents who were missionaries, and he died in 2001. After serving in the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Second World War, he started a career in the banking industry and went on to own several manufacturing firms with his wife, Neta. They were married for almost 50 years until her death in 1985. Several years later, Helliwell remarried and he and his wife, June, were together for 10 years. Though he was never a father himself, he was a father figure to many and gave generously to various charitable causes.
“Give back.” That’s the Harris-Taylor Family mantra. But these are not just mere words, they are actions.

“We have always told our children that we all need to give to others,” said Neil Harris, a senior partner in the Tax Group at Goodmans LLP. “They’ve had the good fortune to travel around the world with Katie and me, but they’ve also been exposed to poverty and the desperate living conditions that many people endure. They realize that they are privileged and have already started to identify ways in which they can help make a difference.”

Neil and his wife, Katie Taylor ’84 (LLB/MBA), who is President and Chief Operating Officer of Four Seasons Hotels and Resorts, believe that education has been a major factor in their success and they have demonstrated their appreciation by already giving generously to their alma maters: the University of Toronto (where they both completed their undergraduate degrees) and the Schulich School of Business where Katie earned her MBA. The members of the family are also long-time supporters of the United Way of Greater Toronto and the Hospital for Sick Children, where Katie has volunteered for many years.

They felt it was now time to give to Osgoode and they were especially generous, making a gift of $250,000. In honour of their generosity, the Law School will name the main reading room in the newly renovated Law Library the Harris-Taylor Reading Room.

“I spent four years at Osgoode doing the Joint Program, and feel very connected to the School,” remarked Ms. Taylor. “I have no doubt that my legal education has contributed to my success in business. Lawyers are taught to think critically and that is an invaluable skill to have.”

The new main-floor entrance to the Law Library will lead directly into the Harris-Taylor Reading Room, which will be a comfortable, light-filled space and a focal point of the renovated library.

“I am absolutely delighted that the Harris-Taylor family has chosen to make their gift to us,” said Chief Law Librarian Louis Mirando. “The Osgoode library has one of the most important law collections in the world and the Harris-Taylor Reading Room will be a wonderful setting for its use.”

The Harris-Taylor family hopes that their gift will inspire future generations of students who will use the new space to excel in their studies, appreciate their education and, yes, someday also ‘give back’!
When Alison Youngman made her way to Canada from England 40 years ago, she was all alone with just $200 in her pocket. A degree from Osgoode Hall Law School changed her life. And now, thanks to the partners at international business law firm Stikeman Elliott, the lives of many more promising young lawyers in need will change for the better.

More than 75 members of the firm from around the world contributed $250,000 to create The Alison Youngman/Stikeman Elliott Entrance Award at Osgoode. Their gifts were matched by the Ontario government through the Ontario Trust for Student Support and endowed to honour the life and accomplishments of Youngman ’84, a Stikeman Elliott partner who lost her battle with lung cancer in March 2009. The Alison Youngman/Stikeman Elliott Entrance Award will be presented annually to a student entering Osgoode’s JD program with a demonstrated history of volunteerism and financial need.

“Because of Alison’s story and how meaningful her law degree was in opening doors in her life, this is an ideal way of honouring her,” says Jim Harbell ’82, and one of eight partners to lead Stikeman Elliott’s fundraising campaign. “We’re giving students who otherwise might not be able to attend law school, a chance to study at Osgoode.”

Youngman’s law career began in 1972 when she joined Stikeman Elliott as a clerk. She returned to the firm after graduating in 1984 and was promoted to partner in 1992. An active community volunteer, Youngman was named one of Canada’s “Women of Distinction” by the YWCA in 2004. The Osgoode Hall Law School Alumni Gold Key Award for Achievement was presented to her posthumously earlier this year.

“Alison’s pride in her Osgoode degree was matched only by the pride we felt in her accomplishments,” says Osgoode Interim Dean Jinyan Li. “I’m warmed by her life’s story and by the exceptional generosity demonstrated by her colleagues.”

The Alison Youngman/Stikeman Elliott Entrance Award builds on an impressive history of support from Stikeman Elliott and its 200 partners. The firm recently supported The Osgoode Building Campaign with an additional gift of $212,000, including individual pledges and matching firm support.

“Osgoode is an important part of who Alison was and how she will be remembered,” adds Harbell. “In the years to come, we hope she’s smiling down on the many Youngman award winners who are applying their education to benefit society.”
Just walking through the door of Torkin Manes it’s obvious: the firm is about community. The plaques in the reception area pay tribute to the firm’s philanthropy, which has been generous, but there is also a strong sense of community within the firm. It is apparent from the laughter and gentle teasing that the partners all like each other and get along very well.

“It’s a great place to come to work and we are all very proud of what the firm has achieved,” said Jeffrey Cohen ’84, managing partner. “There is no doubt that a part of our success can be attributed to the education we received at law school and we are glad that we are able to participate in this Osgoode project.”

The firm’s gift of $100,000 to The Building Osgoode Campaign for the creation of the 50 to 60-seat Torkin Manes Classroom is perfectly attuned to today’s way of teaching. Gone are the days when vast windowless classrooms were the norm. The best law schools in North America today, and this also holds true for a number of other academic disciplines as well, are moving to smaller classes that emphasize hands-on, interactive, collaborative learning.

“As our curriculum has changed over the years we have had a greater need for seminar rooms and mid-size classrooms that bring professors and students together in a way that traditional lecture courses never could,” remarked Interim Dean Jinyan Li. “This gift will allow us to construct a space in our new building that is absolutely perfect for our needs.”

Ron Manes ’71, founding partner of Torkin Manes and the first president of the Osgoode Alumni Association, remembers when the School’s building was state-of-the-art. He appreciates, though, that time has taken its toll on the Osgoode building and that it currently does not meet the needs of a modern law school program.

“There is something very special about a strong community,” Manes said. “It knits individuals together in a way that contributes to the greater whole. We hope that the Torkin Manes Classroom will contribute to bringing faculty and students closer together and make the learning experience at Osgoode that much better.”
On May 29, 2009, Peter Kent, minister of state of foreign affairs (Americas), John Milloy, Ontario’s minister of training, colleges and universities, and Mario Sergio, MPP for York West, joined York University President & Vice-Chancellor Mamdouh Shoukri, then Osgoode Hall Law School Dean Patrick Monahan, lead donor Dr. Ignat Kaneff and about 100 invited guests to announce the federal and provincial governments will contribute a total of $25 million under the Federal-Provincial Knowledge Infrastructure Program toward the cost of the renovation and expansion of the Osgoode building. The remainder of the funding will come from the many alumni and other donors who have made gifts to The Building Osgoode Campaign and from York University.

The Fred M. Catzman, QC, LSM Award

Fred Catzman (1907-2003) was awarded the Silver Medal when he graduated from Osgoode Hall Law School in 1929. He practised law at Catzman & Wahl with his son, Marvin, who went on to become a judge on the Court of Appeal for Ontario.

Fred had a long and distinguished career as a prominent Canadian lawyer. He was Vice-Chairman of the Canadian Bar Association (Ontario Commercial Law Section) from 1949 to 1950 and Chairman of the Personal Property Securities Act of Ontario Committee from 1960 to 1974. He authored the Bulk Sales Act of Ontario, and co-authored the Personal Property Security Law of Ontario 1976 and The Personal Property Security Act 1989. Fred received the Law Society of Upper Canada Medal in 1986 for his significant contribution to the legal profession and in 2002 he was appointed to the Order of Ontario.

Marvin Catzman, who died in 2007, left a portion of his estate to create an award to honour his father’s career, his passion for the profession, and his kind and gracious approach to the practice of law.

The government of Ontario, through the Ontario Trust for Student Support, matched the $25,000 gift to create a permanent $50,000 endowment. The interest from the endowment will be given annually to a student entering the JD program who has made significant contributions to his or her community and who demonstrates financial need.
At the Law School’s toast to the graduating class on March 25, 2009, third-year students presented a cheque for $12,500 to Gina Alexandris ’91, Assistant Dean, Student Services, and then Dean Patrick J. Monahan ’80. The gift will be matched by the Ontario government and will create an endowed student bursary that will be given annually to a JD student who has demonstrated an outstanding commitment to Osgoode student life through participation in clubs, groups or activities.

Through the generosity of gifted lawyers Charles Dubin ’44 and Anne Dubin ’51, who rose to the top of their profession, The Honourable Charles and Anne Dubin Entrance Award has been established at Osgoode Hall Law School.

Charles, who received an honorary doctorate of laws from York University in 1990, died in 2008 and Anne in 2007. It is through his estate that Charles and Anne have given $100,000 to establish the award.

The endowed award, matched by the Ontario government through the Ontario Trust for Student Support, will be given annually to as many as five students entering the JD Program who have high academic standing and demonstrate financial need.

“This entrance award honours the memory of an extraordinary couple who went to Osgoode, loved Osgoode and held it in the utmost esteem,” says Francie Klein, one of Charles’ two nieces.

A superb jurist as well as a lawyer, Charles became a national figure after chairing the 1989-1990 Royal Commission into Drug Use in Amateur Sport. He also served as Chief Justice of Ontario from 1990 to 1996. Anne was a pioneering corporate lawyer at Tory, Tory, DesLauriers & Binnington (now Torys LLP), who served on the boards of many companies and non-profit organizations, including York’s Board of Governors.

Together, they were a team who were devoted to one another during their 55-year marriage. The couple, who did not have children, shared many of the same interests, recalls Klein. “They were best friends. They discussed each other’s lives in great detail. They challenged one another intellectually. It was never just idle chit-chat around their table. They also had fun together. He had a wonderful sense of humour and was so charismatic.”

Charles, whose professionalism, persuasiveness and keen ability to hone in on the nut of a legal problem catapulted him into the ranks of such legendary Canadian lawyers as Arthur Maloney and John J. Robinette, was “so thankful and grateful for what he was able to do,” Klein says.

“He wanted to be able to give back.”
The William Osgoode Society has been established to honour the Law School’s most generous donors. Named after the first Chief Justice of Upper Canada, the Society reflects the School’s long history and important influence on legal education. Members in the Society include individuals, law firms, foundations and associations whose cumulative paid gifts total more than $25,000. Members who have given more than $100,000 will also be recognized in the York University Honour Court.

The Osgoode Hall Law School Fund

Chair’s Message

The large number of Osgoode supporters listed in this publication is not only impressive, it is vital. As Chair of the Osgoode Hall Law School Fund, I am, of course, delighted. It is obvious that we share the same belief: Osgoode is an important institution that warrants our support.

Many of the donors are alumni who have personally experienced the benefits of an Osgoode education and are giving back to an institution that was an important part of their personal and professional development. But donations to Osgoode support more than the School itself, they also support Canada’s justice system. As a criminal lawyer, I appreciate how important it is to have well-educated lawyers and judges. The actions and decisions of these people have a direct effect on all citizens of this country. They must have the best education possible so that justice can be served and Osgoode is committed to ensuring that they do.

On behalf of Osgoode Hall Law School, I extend my sincere thanks to all of the donors in this report. Your contributions are truly appreciated and make a tremendous difference.

Sincerely,
Anil Kapoor ’86
Chair, Osgoode Hall Law School Fund

Osgoode Hall Law School is one of this country’s finest law schools as a result of the vision, wisdom and resolve of those charged with its leadership. Our gift societies are named in honour of the five first deans for their contribution to building an institution that is internationally recognized for its excellence in legal education.

The societies recognize the contributions of annual fund donors who are committed to upholding our tradition of academic excellence by supporting the Law School’s mission. Membership in a society is based on paid gifts to Osgoode Hall Law School during the University’s fiscal year.

Thomas Brown Phillips Stewart (1865–1892) was a barrister and poet who died at the early age of 27. He left a portion of his estate to establish a student library at Osgoode Hall, which later became the largest law library in Canada.

The Thomas Brown Phillips Stewart Society was created to commemorate Thomas Brown Phillips Stewart as Osgoode’s first benefactor and to honour all those who, like this generous young man, made Osgoode Hall Law School a part of their legacy through a planned gift.

Membership in the Society is offered to those alumni and friends who wish to donate to Osgoode by means of a planned gift including charitable bequests, life insurance or other future arrangements. All members will be recognized annually in the Osgoode Hall Law School Report on Giving.

We would be pleased to discuss with donors and their advisors, the many areas within the Law School where bequests can be directed. We do appreciate the opportunity to review the terms of the Will (especially for specific bequests) before they are finalized, so we can confirm our ability to accept and fulfill the gift’s intent.
